

The Oregon Pain Summit 2022

The Pain Experience: Empowerment Through Practice-Changing Perspectives

Now, in its 4th year, the Oregon Pain Summit is an interdisciplinary conference that explores the pain experience, its contributing factors, and potential treatments from an evidence-based perspective. As the chronic pain epidemic continues to grow, there have been large advances in the understanding of pain's pathophysiology and its management. The Oregon Pain Summit hosts local, national, and international experts on pain including:

Kevin Cuccaro, DO	Lance McQuillan, MD	Robyn Crook, PhD
Jonathan Betlinski, MD	David Clarke, MD	Mythili Ransdell, MD
Sharna Prasad, PT/DPT	Rachel Zoffness, PhD	Matthew J Burke, MD/FRCPC
David Simmons, MD	Priscilla Latta, MD	Daniel Kang, PT/DPT
Brianna Sustersic, MD	Eleasa Sokolski, MD

Topics covered include – the neurobiology of pain, trauma informed care, and the evidence behind current treatments. This conference targets any clinician or patient who treats and experiences pain. Attendance will be both in person and virtual.

"I have been practicing Family Medicine for 21 years and always struggled to understand my patients who were suffering with pain. As I started to learn more about the neurobiology of pain, I realized how my misunderstanding of pain contributed to my struggles and impacted my patient care. Since attending the Oregon Pain Summit for the past several years, I now connect with patients on an entirely different level. It has transformed me, my practice, and enjoyment of medicine." -Brent Godek, MD, Samaritan Senior Medical Director

"I highly recommend the Oregon Pain Summit to any provider who works with patients with persistent pain, be they physicians or other health care professionals. This summit really rocked my world in terms of beginning to learn a whole new (more accurate and evidence based) model of the physiology of persistent pain and how it expresses itself in our patients, and importantly, how to treat it more effectively." Jennifer Smits, MD, MPH. IM, Hospitalist GSRMC

"In my rheumatology practice, most of my patients have chronic pain, so I thought I knew quite a bit about this topic. However, after attending the 2021 Oregon Pain Summit, I realized that I was operating under an outdated model of pain. As I have learned about the latest science of the neurobiology of pain, I have felt empowered with many new and better tools for treating patients with chronic pain. I highly recommend that all clinicians attend this conference. It will blow your mind!" - Jonathan Jones, MD, Samaritan Rheumatology
